Shrouds of black mist surrounded them, blocking out everything around them until only the two of them stood alone in the darkness.

"I thought perhaps you'd like to make this a bit more interesting, Jabami-san." Yami Bakura says, and Yumeko cannot help but smile, "Every lifepoint you lose sends another piece of your mind into eternal darkness. Lose, and be devoured by the shadows for all eternity."

Jabami Yumeko runs a fingertip over the edge of her deck and grins. Her face flushes, that familiar thrill of excitement tingling its way up her spine. Yumeko watches, her tongue darting out to wet her parched lips as Yami Bakura summons his first monster to the field.

"I end my turn," Yami Bakura growls at her from across the playing field. She can see the smirk pulling at his lips and she has to stop the giddy chuckle that nearly bubbles up out of her throat.

The cards in her hand are useless right now, but that's a moot point. Yumeko draws a card from her deck, eyes dancing over it briefly. Her grin widens, she brings the card up to her lips and presses a soft kiss to the corner of it before placing it face down on her duel disk. It's a bluff. She can't wait for him to call her on it.
